PARK INTERPRETIVE SPECIALIST

Palomar Mountain State Park has an immediate need for a Park Interpretive Specialist. Through personal interaction with the public, your job will be to "translate" or interpret the meaning of the park's natural and human heritage, so that visitors will understand and appreciate the importance of its history and biological, geological, archaeological, cultural, recreational and scenic resources.

You'll lead hikes, give nature presentations and campfire talks, prepare and maintain exhibits, organize school field trips, maybe show kids how to spot a deer or plant a tree. You'll also be tasked with reaching out to the community in an effort to encourage visitation, as well as assisting in the park's volunteer program.

Experience as a park interpreter isn't necessary, but we do require a variety of demonstrated educational and communications skills, as well as an undergraduate degree (or equivalent in experience). And of course you'll need to love the outdoors!

Rich in natural beauty and cultural heritage, Palomar Mountain State Park is a living legacy created in 1933 that's been preserved and passed down for all Californians to enjoy. Why not consider being a part of this legacy, and help people discover it, enjoy it and make it a part of their lives? Apply today! For more information and to apply, visit www.palomarsp.org/interpreter.
